What's going on this week?

A recent investigation exposing the scale of chimpanzee trafficking has helped police in Nepal uncover a smuggling operation. The discovery found two baby chimpanzees, exhausted and hungry, and sucking their thumbs. The tiny animals had been captured in the wild in Nigeria and then flown thousands of miles to Nepal to be sold as pets.

Things to talk about at home...

- 🍏 Which animals do you think are acceptable to be kept as pets? Why?
- 🍏 What differences do you think there are between keeping animals as pets at home and keeping wild animals in a zoo?
- 🍏 Why do you think animals like chimpanzees are worth so much money?
- 🍏 If the people who buy the chimpanzees take good care of them, do you think that that is ok?
